ENGLISH

ENGL 264 THE BIBLE AS LITERATURE MWF 11:30

3 CR.
Deering

My section of English 264 will read selected portions of the Hebrew Bible, New Testament, and Apocrypha. The course will entail a close study of a variety of literary forms and techniques: the structure of historical and biographical narratives (the Garden of Eden, the Exodus from Egypt, the Crucifixion/Resurrection), development of plot and character (in the stories of Abraham, David, Elijah, Jesus), and growth of prophetic and poetic styles and traditions (Isaiah, Micah, Job, Psalms), and the distinctive features of wisdom (proverbs, parables) and apocalyptic literature (Daniel, Revelation). Students will write 10-12 one page papers. There will be no tests or final exam. Students will participate weekly in team discussions of the reading.

HISTORY

HIST 103 INTRODUCTION TO THE MEDIEVAL WORLD MWF 10:30

3 CR.
Zook

This course is an overview of medieval history in Europe from the fall of the Roman Empire to the birth of the Renaissance. We explore political, religious, and social changes as well as economic, technological, and cultural developments. We seek to understand the complexity of the medieval past, including an awareness of the experiences of ordinary men and women, as well as the rich and powerful. Topics include: The Birth of Christianity; The Decline of the Roman Empire; The Barbarian Nations; Islam; The Feudal World; The Crusades & Chivalry; Daily Life; The Church, Heresy & Witchcraft; The Black Death; The Renaissance.

HIST 395 JR RESEARCH SEMINAR: OCCUPIED EUROPE: NAZIS IN THE ARCHIVES 3 CR. TTh 10:30-11:45

Foray

This Junior Research Seminar for History majors will be organized around the subject of Nazi-Occupied Europe, with a particular concentration upon Western Europe. First, the class will examine such topics as Hitler's rise to power, the Nazi New Order in Europe, and the war's effects upon civilian populations. The majority of the semester, however, will be spent exploring research and writing methodologies; archival practices and collections; and specific national case studies, as selected by participants in the class. This is not a typical research class where students produce a heavily-weighted "term paper." Rather, this is a process-oriented class intended to introduce History majors to archival research and historical writing. All participants will craft an original written analysis drawing upon the British Foreign Office materials contained in the "Conditions and Politics in Occupied Western Europe, 1940-1945" archival database. Work for this class will be completed incrementally over the course of the semester, and all students will be held accountable for their work before the instructor and each other. Students are expected to come to the course with a solid understanding of modern European history so that they can narrow their topics as soon as possible.

HIST 423 TOPICS IN GERMAN HISTORY: GERMAN BUSINESS HISTORY MWF 12:30

3 CR.
Gray

German companies are the envy of the world. BMW, Volkswagen, Bayer, BASF, Krupp, Siemens –these are legendary firms whose exports have global reach. However, German industry is also notorious for its collusion in military aggression and genocide (and, more recently, evading U.S. environmental standards). This course features case studies of German entrepreneurship and invites students to investigate a contemporary German firm.

HISTORY

HIST 595 THE HOLOCAUST AND GENOCIDE MWF 10:30

3 CR.

Klein-Pejšová

The implications of the attempted destruction of European Jewry by the Nazis during the Second World War, what we term the Holocaust – along with millions of Roma (Gypsies), Poles, Russians, homosexuals, the handicapped, and others – are terrifyingly far-reaching. Genocide and ethnic cleansing are central to our understanding of the twentieth century. This course examines the historical origins and practices of genocide, centering on the causes and nature of the Holocaust as historical event, including its aftermath, problems of its representation and commemoration. We will work through a comparative framework to explore the Armenian genocide during World War One, and the cases of Rwanda and Yugoslavia in the 1990s. We will make use of primary sources and secondary literature, fiction, memoirs, film and other media in the course of our examination.

INTERDISCIPLINARY STUDIES

IDIS 491 THE EVOLUTION OF THE BIBLE & ITS REVOLUTIONARY EFFECTS TTh 3:00 – 4:15

3 CR.

Robertson

The Bible is the most read book, or maybe the most talked-about book of any that has ever been written. Many people had a hand in writing it, and far more than that have tried to say what it means. Its ideas have helped to shape our ideas about not only God, but about business, architecture, ethics, race, the relationship of men and women in society, etc. Sometimes the Bible is mis-used to form opinions, but even a misuse is a use. You may not even realize how the Bible has touched your life, even if you think you're not religious. *Counts towards B-Category I

JEWISH STUDIES

JWST 330 INTRODUCTION TO JEWISH STUDIES TTh 12:00 – 1:15 Meets with HIST 302 and POL 493.

This course fulfills the College of Liberal Arts Racial and Ethnic Diversity Core Requirement.

The purpose of this course is to critically introduce students to the “Jewish Experience,” from its inception, in the Ancient Near East, to our present time. Using several disciplines—religion, philosophy, history, literature, film, anthropology, sociology—we will explore the ways and manners by which Judaism manifests itself, as well as how we come to study Judaism academically. Thus, on the one hand, we will examine the internal (ontology) intricacies and complex textures of the core ideas which have created Judaism from within, that is, how a group of people created Judaism, in both reflexive and unreflexive fashion, in reference to their material and historical conditions. In other words, what is Judaism and what does it mean to be Jewish from the Jewish perspective which has always already been in reference to its locality. On the other hand, we will examine how Judaism has been studied externally, from without, (epistemology) by others, as well as by modern academic disciplines. For this external approach has also shaped and determined the ontological constitution of Judaism. What and how others think of us is eo ipso, part and parcel of who we are. We must understand that these internal-external approaches are intimately intertwined. It is first and foremost practice that creates and sustains an idea/phenomenon, namely, it is a mutual venture between those who lead their lives by Judaism, Jews who bear it on their backs as it were, and those who react to and study how these people indeed, bear it through their historical consciousness, faith, philosophy, and daily costumes. In addition, this course is intended as a gateway to Jewish Studies major or minor at Purdue University, or for that matter, anywhere else. As a general rule, its scope and methodological approaches will make it both worthwhile and necessary for any undergraduate student who wishes to do more in-depth work in Jewish Studies.

JEWISH STUDIES

JWST 590 DIRECTED READINGS IN JEWISH STUDIES

Time and instructor to be arranged

3 CR.

A reading course in aspects of Judaica directed by the instructor in whose particular field of specialization the content of the reading falls. Permission of Instructor and Director of the Jewish Studies Program required.

LANGUAGES & CULTURES

HEBR 102 MODERN HEBREW II

3 CR.

MTWF 9:30

Kantor

Continuation and extension of the first semester. The course aims to develop fluency in reading, comprehension, and spoken language. Knowledge of grammar and vocabulary is expanded.

HEBR 202 MODERN HEBREW IV

3 CR.

MWF 10:30

Kantor

Extensive practice in reading, speaking, and writing Hebrew, based on a variety of subjects from daily life and literature. Continued study of grammar and reading in the modern language.

HEBR 122 BIBLICAL HEBREW II

3 CR.

TTh 9:00-10:15

Robertson

The second semester of biblical Hebrew will continue the study of reading, vocabulary and grammar, based on selections from the Hebrew Bible.

HEBR 222 BIBLICAL HEBREW IV

3 CR.

TTh 10:30-11:45

Robertson

The fourth semester of biblical Hebrew exposes the student to both narrative and poetic sections of the Bible. This semester we will be translating the patriarchal narrative in Genesis, from Genesis 22 (Abraham's sacrifice of Isaac) through the beginning of the story of Joseph. Some ability in reading Hebrew, modern or biblical Hebrew is required.

PHILOSOPHY

PHIL 206 PHILOSOPHY OF RELIGION

3 CR.

TTh 3:00-4:15

Bergmann

The course will be divided into three parts. The first part of the course will deal with a question that has loomed large in the philosophical history of western monotheism (Judaism, Christianity and Islam): is belief in God rational? The focus here will be on arguments for God's existence (such as the argument from the fact that the universe seems to have been designed), on arguments against God's existence (e.g., the argument that a perfect God wouldn't permit terrible things to happen and yet they happen), and on whether belief in God can be rational if it isn't supported by argument. The second part of the course will focus on the fact that there are many different religions in the world, most of which claim to be the only religion that is right about the most important truths. Our question here will be whether, in the face of this plurality of religions, it can be rational to think that one's own religion is right and that other religions incompatible with it are mistaken. The third part of the course will focus on some questions in philosophical theology—questions such as: Can we be free if God foreknows what we will do? Does it make sense to make requests of God in prayer given that, whether we pray or not, a perfect being would know what we want and would do what is best? The course requirements will include several short quizzes, a midterm exam, and a final exam.

RELIGION

REL 231 RELIGIONS OF THE WEST

3 CR.

MWF 11:30

Ryba

Meets with PHIL 231.

The purpose of this course is to provide a systematic survey of those religions variously described, in the West, as ‘Western Religions’ or ‘Religions of the West.’ Immediately, a problem arises because the adjective, ‘Western,’ is questionable. The descriptions ‘Western’ or ‘of the West’ have been understood as designating a problematic geo-cultural location—but also a homogeneous style of religious thought because of their common origins as Abrahamic monotheisms. Contemporary scholars of religion, and indigenous believers, often contest this imputed homogeneity and have pointed to the incredible complexity and fluidity of these traditions, characteristics which resist simplistic classification. Well aware of the challenges such descriptions present, we, in this course, will engage in a comparative study of the systems of belief, thought, and practice traditionally termed ‘Western Religions’ by Western scholars of religions. This will be accomplished through a series of readings on these systems’ histories, philosophies and scriptures.

The approach adopted in this course is phenomenological and comparative. Adopting the phenomenological method in the academic study of religion means that we shall try to study these religions objectively and empathetically. Adopting the comparative method in the academic study of religion means that we shall try to compare and contrast the features of these religions with the intent of observing similarities, dissimilarities and regularities, where meaningful items of comparison occur. The phenomenological method (properly applied) gives us access to a religion’s rationale; the comparative method (properly applied) gives us access to the rationale of Religion.

The systems of belief, thought, and practice which will be studied and compared in this course are: (1) the Judaic tradition (* > 1800 BCE [~1900]), (2) the Christian tradition (* ~ 4 BCE/>~30 CE), and (3) the Islamic tradition (* > 622 CE [AH 1]). This survey and comparison will take place according to a fixed set of categories. The following will be surveyed for each of these traditions: (a) its worldview, (b) its scriptures, (c) its hierology, (d) its cosmology, (e) its anthropology, (f) its soteriology, and (g) its most important schools of thought (or forms of scholasticism). To simplify this comparison, we shall not be considering these structures across all periods of each tradition (and in their full denominational complexity) but only within the span of time which was characteristically formative for later development. This will be called the “classical” period of each.

REL 318 THE BIBLE AND ITS EARLY INTERPRETERS

3 CR.

TTh 1:30-2:45

Robertson

This course will start with observation of the development of early themes in later parts of the Hebrew Bible and proceed to the on-going influence of these themes in Jewish literature outside the Hebrew canon (apocrypha, pseudepigrapha, targums, midrash, Josephus, Philo, and other Hellenistic Jewish authors), as well as in pagan literature of this era and in early Christian literature, particularly the New Testament.

SOCIOLOGY

SOC 310 RACIAL AND ETHNIC DIVERSITY 3 CR.
