

Can there be a Christian Social Science?

The Case of W. Robertson Smith

A Lecture by

Robert Segal*

Sixth Century Chair in Religious Studies, University of Aberdeen

Response by

Stuart Robertson

Purdue University

Christian Smith Confounding Philip Cohen: With (left to right) Brad Wilcox, Mark Regnerus, C. Wright Mills, and Talcott Parsons (Original source: Giovanni di Paolo, St. Thomas Aquinas Confounding Averroës, from Wikimedia Commons)

Date: November 20, 2014

Time: 7:00 PM – 8:30 PM

Place: RAWL 1062

*Robert Segal teaches and writes on theories of myth and on theories of religion. He has written or edited Theorizing About Myth, Myth: A Very Short Introduction, The Gnostic Jung, Joseph Campbell: An Introduction, Jung on Mythology, The Myth and Ritual Theory, Hero Myths, 30-Second Mythology, and the Blackwell Companion to the Study of Religion. He has long been at work on an intellectual biography of William Robertson Smith. (He recently voted against Scottish independence.)

Sponsored by: the Aquinas Educational Foundation, the Religious Studies Program at Purdue, and the St. Thomas Aquinas Center.