

POL 491 Senior Seminar in Comparative Renewable Energy Politics
3:00-4:15 pm, TR
Mark Tilton

The course compares renewable politics and policy in the United States, Germany, Japan, France and China. The course explores why renewable energy politics and policy vary so much between countries and what factors are driving change. More broadly, the course takes on the political question of how societies transform themselves technologically when faced with new challenges.